

Tinder Kicks Off A Return to IRL with Festival Mode™

Partnerships with The World's Biggest Festivals Across 10 Countries Globally Help Music Lovers Find Their Match This Festival Season

LONDON (April 14, 2022) — Tinder is partnering with the world's leading live entertainment company Live Nation, as well as live event producers AEG Presents and Superstruct Entertainment to introduce Festival Mode™, a feature designed to help members find their new festival crew as they prepare for the first true festival season in years.

According to a recent survey of singles 18-39 in age, 75% agree that being able to connect with someone online before meeting in-person would ease some of the pressure of making a good first impression*.

Launching today, Festival Mode bridges the gap between online introductions and IRL connections by allowing Tinder members to find fellow festival goers before the show. With nearly 1 in 3 singles (31%) planning to attend a music festival or concert this year, Festival Mode helps music lovers break the ice and connect over shared interests. A welcome addition to Tinder, as 64% of singles say they enjoy meeting new people while attending live music events, and over 3 in 5 (61%) say they've become friends, or more, with people they met at a music festival or concert.

Here's how it works:

- Festival Mode is live in Tinder Explore, as one of the many ways members can discover and interact with each other through shared interests and experiences.
- Members can select which of this year's hottest music festivals they plan to attend and will be able to match with others also going as early as a month before the show.
- Festival Mode will feature over 20 of the biggest festivals from around the world, like All Points East, Lollapalooza and Sónar.
- It will also include a "Festival Goers" space, for those who don't see their event listed or are simply just fans of festival culture to connect.

"Music is a universal language and the number-one interest among Tinder members worldwide. So many of our members are excited to jump back into in-person events. We wanted to build on that excitement and offer them a head start at meeting someone new ahead of one of the biggest festival seasons in years," said Kyle Miller, VP of Product Innovation at Tinder. "Festival Mode gives you a chance to get yourself back out there, meet new people, and make friends before you hit the festival grounds. It's a great, low-pressure way to make real world connections again."
